Her Side and His—Use for Left-over Pie Dough—Pastry Shells or Cheese Straws Made of Left-over Dough—Checked Velvet Sport Suit Coat—Things the Housewife Should Know.

WALT GOES BACK TO LUCY.
The "morning stars," those of the studio party whose favorite bedtime was dawn, were brewing a fresh bowl of punch at Phil Dean's jamboree when Walt took Lucy to her door across the square. They could see the lights in Phil's studio take a fresh lease of life.
"You're not to go back there tonight, Walt!" Lucy said, watching the thoughtful look Walt sent toward the scene of gaiety they had left. You see, I'm taking Janet's place in her absence and lecturing you—Walt broke in. "You don't know what a modern wife she is!"
"I'm glad—I'm glad. Good night, Walt!" Lucy went into her house abruptly.

Wait looked after her thoughtfully and as thoughtfully crossed the square and went into his room after hesitating outside Phil Dean's door. There was such a piquant appeal about the old gaiety—a tang that was absent even in the old days. But he decided for bed.
He fell asleep in his old, rickety bed of bachelor nights, suffused with a feeling of mingled pleasures that were yet unreal. He had had a carefree, oldtime evening of it. Somewhere away from it was Janet and another home in another world that would be pleasant to return to. Yet the combination of the two was unusual and felt unreal.

Next morning, before he went into "Pop" Gallup's for his breakfast as of old, he telephoned Janet at the apartment.

"Hello?" came her crisp, cheery, eagerly feminine voice.
"This is Mr. Stedman, Mrs. Stedman!" Walt said. "You remember me? How are we this morning?"
Janet's voice and words seemed gay and more jocular than he had heard her for weeks, as she replied to his fooling in kind. Evidently she was enjoying the vacation as much as he. Walt was not one to extract trouble needlessly. But he could not help feeling there was something peculiar about both of them taking their separation so lightly—enjoyably. Either there was something unnatural and wrong about it, or they had struck a joyous secret and solution of many a marital problem. He did not know which. The answer would depend on whether this enjoyment was going to increase or not. If they found their separation more and more pleasant with each day, then something was very wrong indeed with them!

He found the old "bunch" at breakfast in Gallup's. The "morning stars" from Phil Dean's party were there, a little subdued from a night of no sleep but not too much so. Lucy was there, finished her cup of chocolate and made room for Walt at her table. Food was still just as good and as cheap as when Walt had no home of his own in the old days, months ago, before he had become a benedict.

Old Janet was missing. She did not come there often in the old days; only as a change from the boarding house. Walt thought it would have been nice to have Janet there. But Lucy was a good substitute. Before they parted for the day, Walt had engaged Lucy's company for dinner that night at Pagan's.
All day Janet's face gleamed in on the figures on his advertising copy. He wondered if, despite her absorption which was so characteristic of her when she worked, she found herself thinking of him at all, as he was thinking in snatches of her. It struck him that he did not know enough to tell himself certainly either way.

That evening in the midst of dinner Lucy said suddenly:
"Here you, Walt Stedman, go straight home to Janet as fast as you can pet! I've been talking to a stone wall for the last hour as far as any attention from you went! I know where your thoughts are and you'd better take yourself there, too!" she cried with a good pretense at jealousy. Walt took her eagerly at her word. He was turning the corner into the street where he and Janet lived when he marked an automobile leaving from in front of the house. It was Roy Nicoll's car and with him was Janet. Walt turned straight about and rejoined Lucy at Pagan's.

USE FOR REMNANTS.
After a pie is all made and tucked in the oven there are often little bits of pastry left on the board, and out of them and a little ingenuity the housewife may fashion other things. For instance, she may gather up the pieces, roll them out again as she would for pie crust, cut out rounds and mold them on the bottom of inverted shallow muffin pans. Prick the bottom of the shells a few times with the tines of a fork and bake in a hot oven. They make attractive little holders for sliced fruit, with whipped cream piled on top, for molded gelatines with the same topping, or for ice cream.

Cheese straws may also be made from left-over pastry. Gather up the trimmings and roll to a thickness of one-quarter of an inch. Sprinkle one-half with finely grated cheese, salt and a little paprika. Fold and press the edges firmly together, fold again and roll out as before. Repeat this process two or three times, depending upon the amount of cheese one wishes to have in the mixture. Then roll out rather thin, cut in strips five to six inches long and one-fourth inch in width. Place in a shallow pan and bake about eight minutes in a hot oven. Parmesan and Edam cheese are the best varieties to use for the straws. When serving, pile them after the fashion of a log cabin and serve with the after dinner coffee and cheese course or with the salad.

CHECKED VELVET SPORT SUIT COAT.
A smart sport spits of velvet, the coat in a checked design of red and blue made hip length with patch pockets and a narrow blue suede belt. The skirt of plain blue velvet is very short, revealing blue and white plaid wool stockings, a tailored blouse of white pique, a soft bow tie of blue silk and a blue felt hat trimmed with a black ribbon around the crown.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.
Put a little salt in starch; gives a gloss to the clothes.
Rub pancake griddle with salt instead of grease. Have a little salt in a muslin bag and rub the hot griddle well each time before using. The cakes will not stick and there will be no smoke or odor.

TO PRESERVE AUTUMN LEAVES.
With a soft cloth apply linseed oil on leaves; press on wrong side with iron not too hot (hot iron makes them brittle). Do the oiling and pressing on newspaper. They will retain their beautiful colors.

HOW GUARDSMEN VOTED.
Dallas, Texas, Nov. 8.—Available figures today from guardsmen voting on the border in Texas and New Mexico showed that Hughes was leading. The total was Hughes 4266, Wilson 3611. KANSAS BANK ROBBED.
Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 9.—Two unmasked men yesterday entered the Security State bank in Rosedale, Kan., a suburb of this city, and after placing the cashier, who was alone in the bank, within the safe, made off with more than $1000. A motor car was used in their escape.

CAPTAIN KOENIG IS GUEST AT BANQUET.
New London, Conn., Nov. 8.—New London's citizens tonight gave a reception and banquet to Captain Paul Koenig and the crew of the German merchant submarine Deutschland. A gold watch, bearing the seal of the city, was presented to the captain and his men received silver match cases and fountain pens.

The dining room in a hotel was decorated with American and German flags. Officers of the Eastern Forwarding company and the crew of the German steamship Willhad, "mother ship" of the submarine, were also present. Mayor Rogers and other leading citizens made complimentary speeches and Captain Koenig responded briefly.

The submarine will be loaded tomorrow and it is understood she may make her dash homeward Friday afternoon. It was reported tonight that the German war submarine U-57 was expected off Pleasure Beach—fifteen miles to the westward—on Friday, but there was no confirmation.

LADIES! SECRET TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Bring Back its Color and Lustre with Grandma's Sage Tea Recipe.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Advertisement.

PROCEEDINGS IN DISTRICT COURT

Sam Sherman's appeal from a $50 fine in the city court for his alleged infraction of the legal speed limit was scheduled for trial today before Judge Nathan J. Harris and a jury, but the case was not ready for hearing and was continued for the term. The jury reported, but could not be used.

The state against Adolph Smith, a jail-breaker, set for trial tomorrow, goes over because the defendant still is at large.

The state against Frank Proctor, who escaped with Adolph Smith and another prisoner, the two being caught at Provo, was dismissed because Proctor and his companion were sent to the penitentiary from Provo.

The state against William Peterson may be tried tomorrow. Attorney Charles Briggs was appointed for the defense. The short time intervening between the appointment and trial was due to Peterson's assurance until now that he would employ his own counsel.

By order of Judge Harris, Hilda L. Steed, an inmate of the State Mental hospital, will be delivered into the custody of Ezra V. Steed, who gave $200 bond for her safety.

Louis J. Garneau today filed a petition in the district court for a modification of the decree divorcing him from Mary C. Garneau and for permission to visit with and have in his own care, away from Mrs. Garneau's home, their 5-year-old son, Louis, Jr. The petitioner averred he was afraid of having trouble in visiting the child at his former wife's home.

Judge James A. Howell dissolved a restraining order concerning the use of community property consisting of $3000 on deposit in the Ogden State bank in the case of Nettie Tout against Fred M. Tout.

Sheriff DeVine today brought into court James K. Wright, Jr., a defaulting juror, who had evidently forgotten about the court calendar.

Judge Harris today filed a decree of distribution completing all litigation in the settlement of the estate of the late Lizzie May Burnett. All debts have been paid.

Brigham City, Nov. 8.—Up to 6 o'clock this evening twenty-eight districts in Boxelder county were reported, with nine districts yet to be heard from. Illinois soft coal has increased within a week in price ranging from 75 cents a ton to $2. The approach of cold weather will send coal up much higher, it is believed.
